Performance machinery spills out onto the tarmac. The hangar is full of cars and guests—and bars dispensing good spirit. The food is outside, on the other side of the P51 and to the right of Bombardier's latest personal, global transportation device as an enticement to acquire a Flexjet fractional ownership. Potential buyers are everywhere.

War birds, new birds and beautiful birds try to distract from the din of old friends reconnecting and new friends discovering shared enthusiasms.

If revival is a renewal of spirit (with apologies to the Southern Baptist Convention) then the McCall Motorworks Revival is so successful it might qualify for a tax-exempt status. Gordon and Molly McCall have achieved their goal to launch the Monterey Weekend on a high note. They may not have anticipated that, for the rest of the weekend, nearly everything else will be far enough below the collective spirit of their Revival to require approach instructions from the Monterey Jet Center pattern. They have given the assembled gearheads enough to poke their heads into and fantasize about to cause changes in career paths on that famous post-Monterey Monday. 🏎️🚗
